TOPIC

Potential Data : How Certain Kind of Information Changes the World We Live In

Time goes on, and the world we live in grows, fast. As you read this, a few tweaks might have been made, making small—or even huge—changes to how things work. New drugs administered to cure potent diseases, revisions to certain countries' economic policies, something as simple as new colour of the 'select' button on your favourite mobile game. Those kinds of change, even the latter, were not made randomly. A huge number of researches were done beforehand, to ensure that the change would work as well as intended — and this is where data come to the picture.

In this competition, we want you to portray, in form of an infographic, which kind of data matters — how, and why, by the perspective of fields of study listed as the subtopics. Your infographic should be made as creative and visually attractive as possible, yet maintaining to be easily understood by those who read it.
